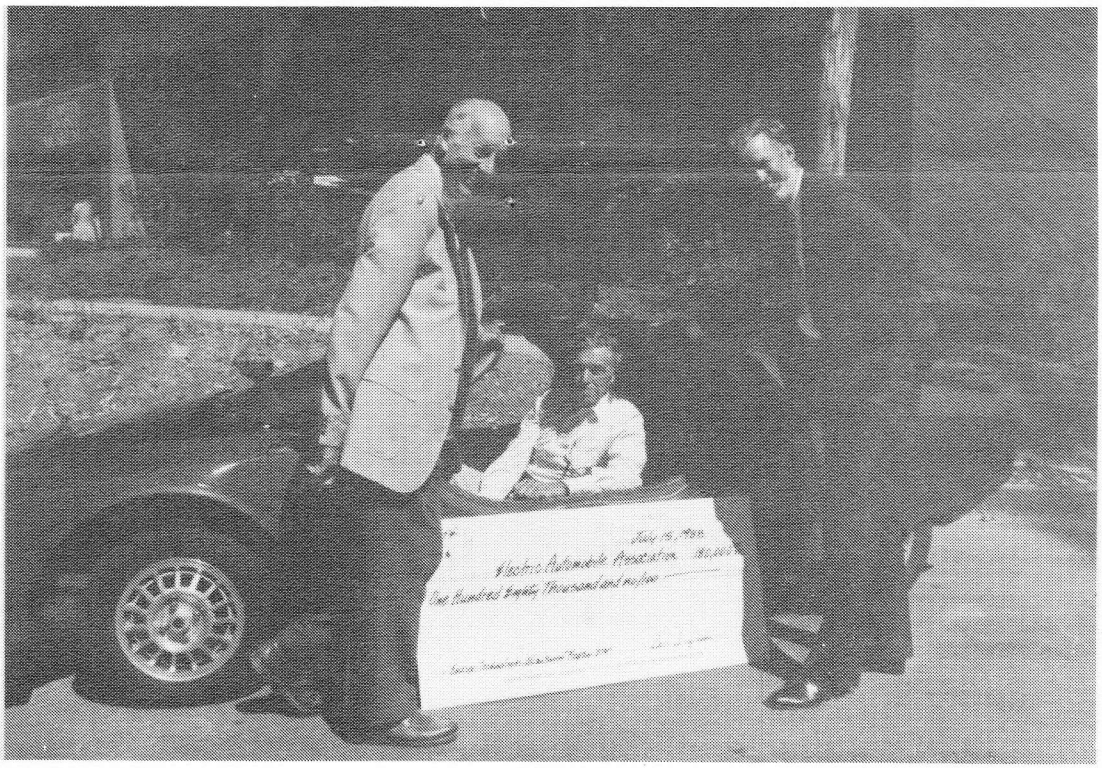
Electric Vehicle Research Gets Big Charge



John Newell, Clarence Ellers and Stephen Rhoads, Executive Director CEC

The Energy Technologies Advancement Program (ETAP) is an innovative funding program that offers loans and research contracts from the State of California. ETAP is administered by the California Energy Commission.

The Electric Automobile Association in Belmont, California has been at the forefront of electric vehicle design and innovations. It has recently been awarded a $180,000 research contract by the California Energy Commission to develop a hybrid auto that will be powered by both electricity and gasoline.

WHEN YOU BUY a Honda automobile, you get a choice of 32 possible combinations of optional equipment. When you buy a Ford Thunderbird, you get a choice of 69,120 possible combinations. Or so report the auto market analysts. It's their contention that cars wouldn't cost so much if the carmakers didn't volunteer so many options.
